1971

Name	What I did after Leaving Homefield Preparatory School	What I am doing now
Andrew Clark	Emigrated with my family to Spain. Attended Sierra Bernia Independent English School. Returned to England with a clutch of A Levels in 1978 and worked for the Passport Office and then the Department of Trade until 1989. Enjoyed a stint running a music production company and gravitated into IT consultancy. It was then "back to school" in 2000 to study graphic design and internet marketing. After graduation I taught graphic design and communication until 2006	Once again, I am now living in Spain and working as the design partner with an internet marketing agency delivering design and communication solutions.
Mr Ken Cole	I went to KCS Wimbledon, Left Brunel University mid-way through my degree and joined the Civil Service, serving in Ministry of Defence, Home Office, H M Treasury and Cabinet Office working on efficiency reviews and contract management. Resigned in 1995 to join a large technology company and then set up my own consultancy business with colleagues in 2001, doing a lot of work for local government.	Married with three grown up children and now living in Englefield Green. I am semi-retired, but still do the occasional consultancy day in between enjoying my hobbies and local volunteering.
Christopher Firth	I moved on to Kingston Grammar School and from there to The University of Cambridge.	My professional career was as a Senior Civil Servant. Happily retired and travelling the world.
Stephen Watson	I went to Dulwich College and from there went to what was then Lanchester Polytechnic and is now Coventry University.	I now live in Leighton Buzzard and work in Milton Keynes as an accountant. Married with four step-children, five step-grandchildren.
